A Revised Primary System.

The most ultra-conservative party politician may hope to see a return to the "convention" system of nominating candidates, and he may labor to bring it to pass. But, if he is honest with himself, he knows that he faces ultimate defeat. On the other hand it is useless for progressives to deny that the direct primary system has not done what it was claimed it would do. What, then, is the democracy of today and tomorrow to do? Have "suggestive" conventions such as New York State has experimented with this year? The subterfuge is too plain, the trickery involved too apparent.

Maj. Gen. Wood, defeated at Chicago and brooding over the results of the present methods used in primary elections of delegates, has come forth with the suggestion, elaborated in the September Metropolitan Magazine, that the system must be reformed, not abolished; and in taking this position he undoubtedly represents the best opinion

He calls for a Federal statute or for uniform State legislation that will make the will of the people registerable on the same day. Pecuniary as well as ethical reasons demand this, as he points out. But he does not stop with this suggestion. Out of bitter experience at Chicago he has come to believe that "unit rule" must go; that district delegates must follow the instructions of their constituents at least for a definite number of ballots. He also attacks the "favorite son" fetich, and the tradition that a State having one is sacrosanct against the propaganda of other candidates.

If the element in the Republican party that backed Maj. Gen. Wood's candidacy will back him in these positions between now and 1924, the next Republican convention may be less subject to control by a "Senatorial cabal," and the next Democratic convention be freer from the manipulations of an aggregation of State and city bosses.

Bureau of Immigration Renovation.

Commendable is the work of reconstruction of the personnel and system of administration of the Bureau of Immigration now under way. It would have been undertaken long since could Assistant Secretary Post have had his say; and if it had been done earlier some unfortunate chapters of recent history, arising from detention and deportation of aliens, need not have been registered, and there would have been less friction between the Departments of Labor and of

At the rate at which Europeans are now coming into the country, not to say anything about heralded plans for a flood of newcomers when restrictions at home are removed and when transport can be provided, it is imperative that this bureau should have its internal friction reduced to a minimum and its standards of operation raised. Congress has crippled the bureau by its reduction of appropriations; and it has evaded adequate action dealing with principles of immigrants' admission hereafter. Politics probably dictated this dilatory course for there are large groups of voters in the country who plan to keep the door as wide open as possible for their co-nationals; and it was policy not to antagonize these groups. But with the Presidential election out of the way. Congress should immediately debate in the most frank and courageous manner the bills now before them that plan to protect national interests and standards.

The Merchant Marine Wage Scale. While there is not the difference between the wage scale of this country and our competitors in ship building and ship operating that there used to be, there also is a limit beyond which operators here cannot go, whether they be the Shipping Board or the many new and earth shall see that them are the shall see that the sha there used to be, there also is a limit beyond which operators here cannot go, whether they be the Shipping Board or the many new and over the name of the Lord; and they attention at the round-table in the society.

The nation's success in utilizing its unprecedented equipment depends now upon co-operative action of labor, capital and the government; and it is not surprising that the Shipping Board should be calling attention to the practical recognition of this fact, recently given by deck officers, engineers, radio operators, sailors, firemen and stewards. Tempted to fight for higher pay by the popularity of that policy, they have come to see that they cannot do it and be patriotic or sincere well wishers of the vocations they follow.

Mr. Bryan an Historic Figure. Mr. Bryan probably has mingled feelings as he reads that the University of Nebraska has begun to collect all available material about him, his career, and his methods as a prophet of political and social reform. He knows, of course, that this means that he is getting old and passing into the ranks of the near "has-beens." No man quite likes such an intimation. On the other hand the university's decision in a way is an ante-mortem avowal in a way is an ante-mortem avowal that he has been and is the State's leading citizen, and a personality that must be reckoned with by all coming national historians.

Ready to Die.

When a man has been shot by an assassin and knows that he may die of his wounds, such words as ASSASSIN and knows that he may die of his wounds, such words as then fall from his lips seidom are other than sincere. Venizelos, the Greek premier, who it is said owes his life to the fact that he wore a meil shirt—as King George of England also is said to do—when he was shot in Paris the other day by George Thrylakis, is said to have remarked: "My enemies have arrived too late. Now my work is accomplished. Our country is strong rived too late. Now my work is accomplished. Our country is strong and can folfow the path marked out." Venizelos' countless admirers in Athens have been giving the folk who still stoop to do the former King's malign work a "rough housing" that will drive them to cover for a time; but Venizelog will be wise to keep on wearing his be wise to keep on wearing his steel shirt, watching his food lest it be poisoned, and suspicious of them who come bearing gifts of adulation.
